THE PRESIDENT COME TO JAMES RIVER.

[illegible] Arrived Brig.-Gen. Ammen in Washington, on Friday, [illegible] were sent to Richmond by the Rebel Government. After they were [illegible] the Rebel army, that the Army was detailed [illegible] Monday afternoon, and [illegible] Saturday, which is more a step at Fortress Monroe. Gen. Ammen commanded that.

OUR ARMY CORRESPONDENCE.

[illegible] Letter Written in the Late Battles—Scenes and Incidents by the Way.

[illegible] Division, Near Harrison's Landing, James River, Wednesday, July 2, 1862.

Yesterday morning this division, having fought its way from Fair Oaks, arrived in camp, during a [illegible] the way, and every avenue to the grounds was choked up with troops and wagons, while our discomfort was [illegible] by the most fiercely which our wearied horses [illegible] at every step. A huge wheat field [illegible] was trampled under foot, or cut down to form beds for the soldiers.

[illegible] the rebels took a position upon a hill [illegible] and commenced shelling our column. Pennsylvania immediately replied with such activity that the rebels were speedily silenced. The gunboats on the river also threw a few shells among the rebels after the battle commenced, the division [illegible] in place of battle, [illegible] to an entirely fair standing the enemy had disposed to give us [illegible]

[illegible] have been coming up the river in [illegible] the whole days past and disembarking [illegible] and below us. The river is alive with steamers [illegible] are rapidly filling up with [illegible] transported to Fortress Monroe.

[illegible] the train of Garnett's Brigade, [illegible] and captured by the [illegible] the rebels were [illegible] by other [illegible] The enemy never dared our [illegible] for this purpose, and, doubtless, [illegible] of wagons and stragglers from [illegible]

[illegible] along the route of the retreat in our edition [illegible] of interest and attractiveness. At no [illegible] half an hour before Carnegie. Every [illegible] could not be moved was burned to huge [illegible] which still [illegible] the fleeing rebels should fall back. The [illegible] were [illegible] the day previously to [illegible] Poplar Hill. There were left the sick of [illegible] which could not be moved. An enemy [illegible] to get forward of ours, on the [illegible] and endeavor to keep in with [illegible] The means of transportation were so limited [illegible] which would soon be strewn [illegible]

[illegible] the enemy which attracted my notice [illegible] of the 5th New-York Regiment, [illegible] the heels of the enemy, [illegible] to save themselves in the Hollow square if they were going to drag one foot [illegible] Company, Capt. J. H. [illegible] Company, with his arm in a [illegible] Lieutenant in the [illegible] with [illegible] over his shoulders. Sergeant [illegible] in his right shoulder. They moved [illegible] while the thundering artillery [illegible] over the road beside them, and [illegible] Long columns of infantry dodged [illegible] the wagon-masters of cavalry dashed [illegible] and baggage wagons and artillery moved in [illegible] but in perfect order.

[illegible] the two officers of the Fifth [illegible] the trees, where spreading branches [illegible] the ruins of an old homestead. Capt. Bartlett [illegible] leaning back against a tree, gazing listlessly upon the busy panorama which was moving before him. [illegible] Carnegie sat leaning upon his knees, with his head resting upon his hands, apparently asleep—[illegible] calm. No traces of pain were visible [illegible] I last saw them at Poplar Hill, [illegible] a feeling of sadness did I see them [illegible] the military and hustling crowd. They [illegible] slightly depressed in consequence of [illegible] had lost none of the brave soldier tone of firmness [illegible] hard and firm as steel, they carelessly [illegible] their way along. Their wounds, [illegible] were neatly healing, and they were [illegible] the hope and desire of soon again joining their destinations in arms.

About a mile beyond Poplar Hill stood a farmhouse, beneath the trees of which, upon a stretcher, lay a Colonel, dying. He had been brought thus far upon the shoulders of some of his men. I only learned that he was a Colonel, before I was hurried away.

Farther on, was Lieut.-Col. Hamm, of Potsdam, of the Eighteenth New-York Regiment, who was shortly wounded in the neck by a musket-ball, in the battle of Friday. He was being carried along the dusty road, with a litter raised on the shoulders of four of his men.

The wife of a wounded German was carrying along all her household equipments, market and all, which she dropped upon her ill-fate military order, while her, with crutch and cane, hobbled by her side, limping and chatting as if all were the most common thing in the world.

Many such sights were seen, on every side. The wounded were overjoyed, though, that many who had not taken a firm step for weeks, from exhaustion suddenly recovered to a wonderful degree.

ARGUS.

BARTLETT'S BRIGADE.

EXTRACT OF PRIVATE LETTER FROM COL. MALLORY, TWENTY-SEVENTH NEW-YORK STATE VOLUNTEERS, COMMANDING SECOND BRIGADE, BARTLETT'S DIVISION.

I have endured the hardships of hunger and [illegible] for the past week, and with the exception of [illegible] nervous, caused by loss of sleep, I am perfectly well. Last night I slept for the first time [illegible] before that I have caught a wink occasionally on the bare ground, without blankets or overcoat. We have fought every day, and marched every night. I have lost in killed and wounded in my brigade over eight hundred, mostly [illegible] I have but one Colonel, one Lieutenant-Colonel, and two Majors. The Fifth Maine Regiment has not got a single field officer left. My horse was wounded, but I am thankful to say I am uninjured. I led on Friday each man in where all my field-officers were killed or wounded. We have a good position here, but expect a fight to-day. Our men have courage, and it would make your heart bleed with sympathy and pride to see them enduring such untold hardships without [illegible] yet ready to see their light hearts and smiling faces [illegible] I ride among them. The enemy have always gone to our rear, and yet our noble army are confident that we could beat them in an open field, although the enemy fight like devils, and with a bain that is unmistakable.

LOSS OF MASSACHUSETTS TROOPS.

BOSTON, Wednesday, July 9.

An official list of the casualties in the Twentieth and Twenty-second Massachusetts Regiments, in the late battles, are published. The Twentieth lost: 3 killed, 18 wounded and brought away; 18 wounded and left on the field; 29 missing; total—116. The Twenty-second Regiment lost: 30 killed; 66 wounded; missing 224; total—315.

THE CAPTURE OF THE TEASER.

Some of the papers report the "rebel gunboat Teaser, as captured on the 4th of July by the United States gunboat Mahaska." To correct an error in the name of our vessel, and to give credit where it is due, will you publish the annexed extract from a private letter:

UNITED STATES STEAMER MAHASKA, JAMES RIVER, Saturday, July 5, 1862.

Yesterday being the Fourth of July, we wanted to have a quiet time, so at 9 o'clock started down the river, and at 10 we reached "Harallee," where it has been our custom to anchor, our member of the signal corps crept out from shore, and hailed us with—"All hands to arms, and let her go, we shall fall aboard!" said Commander Bryson, who has by the way a quick eye and ready will for his business. We soon were in full sight of the stranger; she was flying the "Stars and Bars." We received our 100-pounder on her, and got all ready to fire when down came her flag. We had cleared our bridge for action, but our guns [illegible] and knocking overboard several peace articles from the enemy's deck. Then they tried to return the compliment, but missed us completely. Bang went our second shot, and never did the faithful messenger take a truer course, veering straight through the enemy's vessel, and blowing her half to atoms. The remains were then set on fire, and proved to be what was left of the rebel gunboat, Teaser. The officers and crew, when firing their guns, jumped into a small boat, taking with them their flag, but our second shot [illegible] the boat, jumped into a small boat, taking with them their flag, but our second shot [illegible] everything behind. We jumped on board, and found [illegible] bible, pistols, cutlasses, silver, chairs, bedding, clothes, letters and papers; among the latter a full description of the sub-marine batteries at Drewry's Bluff, and a diagram of all the fortifications. We also found a boat-load made of old dresses, and a complete rebel flag, presented to the United States Navy.

GEN. AVERELL TO COMMAND THE CAVALRY.

HEADQUARTERS ARMY OF THE POTOMAC, CAMP NEAR HARRISON'S LANDING, July 10, 1862.

SPECIAL ORDERS No. 194.—Col. WM. W. AVERELL, Third Pennsylvania Cavalry, is hereby appointed acting Brigadier-General, and is assigned to the command of all the cavalry serving in this army, and will proceed to concentrate it without delay. He will detail for the different corps such number of officers as may be required for ordering duty until he shall report the most performance of all outposts and other duty appertaining to cavalry.

In general engagements he will assign to the cavalry such portions of the army such cavalry force as may be necessary. He will report direct to, and receive his orders from the General commanding this army. Cavalry serving in the different corps will report to Gen. AVERELL without delay, at Westover Landing.

By command of Major-Gen. McCLELLAN.

(Signed) S. WILLIAMS, Asst. Adj.-General.

THE BATTLE OF MALVERN HILL.

INTERESTING BRIEF ACCOUNTS—TERRIBLE SLAUGHTER.

From the Richmond Examiner of Friday, July 4.

The battle of Tuesday was perhaps the fiercest and most sanguinary of the series of bloody conflicts and brave assaults of the last seven days. We have already adverted to the part played in it by Gen. Jackson and others, but as yet we have made little mention of the operations upon the occasion of Gen. MAGRUDER and the troops under his command. We now propose to give such particulars as we have obtained on the field after the battle.

Early on Tuesday morning the enemy, from the position to which he had been driven the night before, continued his retreat in a southeasterly direction toward the gunboats on James River. At eight o'clock A. M. MAGRUDER recommenced the pursuit, cautiously, cautiously, but steadily, and shelling the forests and swamps in front as he progressed. This method of advance was kept up throughout the morning and until four o'clock P. M., without coming up with the enemy. But between four and five o'clock, our troops reached a large open field, a mile long and three-quarters in width, on the farm of Dr. GARNER. The enemy were discovered strongly intrenched in a dense forest on the other side of this field. Their artillery, of about fifty pieces, could be plainly seen bristling on their freshly-constructed earthworks. At ten minutes before five o'clock P. M., Gen. MAGRUDER ordered his men to charge across the field and drive the enemy from their position. Gallantly, they sprang to the encounter, rushing into the field at a full run. Instantly from the line of the enemy's breastworks a murderous storm of grape and canister was hurled into their ranks, with the most terrible effect. Officers and men went down by hundreds, but yet undaunted and unwavering, our line dashed on until two-thirds of the distance across the field was accomplished. Here the carnage from the withering fire of the enemy's combined artillery and musketry was dreadful. Our line wavered a moment and fell back to the cover of the woods. Twice again the effort to carry the position was renewed, but each time with the same results. Night at length rendered a further attempt injudicious and the fight until ten o'clock was kept up by the artillery of both sides. To add to the horrors, if not the dangers, of the battle, the enemy's gunboats, from their position, at Curl's Neck, two and a half miles distant, poured on the field continued broadsides from their immense rifle guns. Though it is questionable, as we have suggested, whether any serious loss was inflicted on us by the gunboats, the horrors of the fight were aggravated by the monster shells, which then shrieking through the forests, and exploded with a concussion, which seemed to shake the solid earth itself. The moral effect on the Yankees of these terror-inspiring allies must have been very great; and in this, we believe, consisted their greatest damage to the army of the South.

It must not be inferred from the above account that the slaughter was all upon our side. We have the best reasons to know that the well-directed fire of our cannon and musketry, both before and subsequent to our efforts to storm the enemy's position, fell with fatal effect upon his heavily massed forces.

At 10 o'clock P. M., the last gun was fired from our side. Each side held the position occupied when the fight began, and, during the remainder of the night, each was busily engaged removing their wounded. The rumble of the enemy's ambulances and wagons, in rapid and hurried motion, did not cease even with the dawn. At 10 o'clock Wednesday morning they were still busy, and discontinued their labors, not because their wounded had been removed, but for fear of our advance. Our wounded were carried from the field directly to the farm-houses in the neighborhood, whence, after their injuries had been examined and dressed, they were brought to this city.

During the morning the enemy evacuated his position and retreated, still bearing in a southeasterly direction and covering their retreat by burning the houses and [illegible] in their path.

The battlefield, surveyed from the east side of Wednesday morning, presented scenes too shocking to be dwelt on without regret. The woods and the field before mentioned were, on the western side, covered with our dead, in all the degrees of disfiguration; while in the woods on the west of the field lay, in about equal numbers, the blue-uniformed bodies of the enemy. Many of the latter were still alive, having been left by their friends in their hasty retreat to escape from the rebels.

Great numbers of horses were killed on Tuesday, and the sight of their disfigured carcases and the [illegible] horrors of the bloody field. The corn fields, too, were strewed by the dead. They were [illegible] of round shot and unexploded shell lay upon the surface of the earth. Among the latter were many of immense size, [illegible] from the gunboats. They were eight inches in width by twenty-three in length. The trees of these woods were everywhere disarranged, [illegible] the leaves. In some places long avenues were cut through the tree-tops, and here and there every tree was cut clear off, as if by a scythe. In one remarkable instance this cut off a tree in apparently [illegible] of the enemy's fight there were no cast-away blue jeans coats, no blankets, no knapsacks, no [illegible] fire-arms, no dead, nor dying, nor wounded. He had evidently, before reaching this point, thrown away everything that could retard his hasty retreat. Nothing was left on the ground, on the side of the field, but killed and wounded Yankees and their guns and knapsacks.

The battle of Tuesday evening has been made memorable by the gallantry and movement of cavalry, which occurred in a portion of Gen. MAGRUDER'S Corps, which had been ordered in very indefinite terms to charge one of the divisions of the enemy's retreating forces. There are several explanations of the affair. The one more, the few explicants who were ordered to take the enemy's battery, which was supported by two heavy brigades, and which swept the thin lines of our devoted men, who had to approach it across a stretch of open ground, is said to have been an appalling sight.

NEWS FROM FORTRESS MONROE.

The Steamer Jamestown Fired Into—The Rebel Batteries Changed—Gen. Burnside—Arrival of the President, &c.

FORTRESS MONROE, Wednesday, July 9—Evening.

The steamer Jamestown, while on her way up to Harrison's Landing yesterday, and when within about four miles of that place, was fired into by the rebels, and one man injured—none killed. The firing was from six rebel field-pieces on the opposite side of the river, and a little below the National army. The steamer was armed at the time. Our gunboats went down and drove out the rebels.

A reconnoitering party was sent out yesterday, and found the rebel pickets within one mile of ours, which leads to the opinion here that another battle is close at hand.

Breastworks are being thrown up at Hampton, about two and a half miles from Fortress Monroe, by our force encamped at that place. The work is progressing rapidly.

Chesterfield 30th evening.

TUESDAY, July 8.

Gen. BURNSIDE has arrived here; is looking well, and appears in fine spirits.

President LINCOLN arrived here at an early hour this morning, had a short interview with Gen. BURNSIDE, and then proceeded up the James River.

The President arrived on the steamer Ariel, accompanied by several officers, including (it is believed) among the latter Gen. HALLECK.

Flag-Officer WILKES arrived here this morning, and many rumors are afloat here as to the object of his visit.

The Tenth New-York Regiment, which has been reported as fairly cut to pieces, had only nine killed, forty-four wounded and thirty missing. There are many who, in various ways got separated from their regiments, are now daily returning—thus greatly diminishing the numbers who have been reported as lost.

There have been two or three arrests here this morning, among the sutlers and civilians, who had received orders to leave, and had disregarded them.

The fortifications at Yorktown are being put in perfect order.

The mail boat from Harrison's Landing does not often arrived here until after the boat for Baltimore has sailed, thus delaying for a day the transmission by mail of letters, &c.

OUR FORTRESS MONROE CORRESPONDENCE.

Military Status of Old Point—Civilians all Sent Away—Sick and Wounded Disinfecting—Shirking Soldiers—A Peculiar Dialogue—Col. E. Biddle Roberts—Brig.-Gen. E. Ferrazzo—Lieut. Charles S. Brooks—Seizure of Contraband Schooners.

OLD POINT, Tuesday, July 8, 1862.

Old Point, during the last day or two, has presented quite a martial appearance. From morning till night vessels are arriving and departing, crowded with living freights of soldiers, but to what destination we can only guess. On land we are perpetually enveloped in clouds of dust from the long trains of wagons and ambulances running to and fro [illegible] of cavalry keep galloping by; nothing is heard but the loud clanking of sabres, as fresh officers keep coming and going, and, at every turn, we see

"The thundering squadron and the rattling car,"

All swiftly turning in the ranks of war!"

or rather hurrying on to headquarters for that purpose. Civilians are very much at a discount, and slink about, feeling very much like the fifth wheel to a wagon—but I suppose we of the Press are, after all, necessary evils.

By the way, talking of civilians, the latter are being taken in hand in earnest to-day. Correct lists are being made of every man ashore, and his business, and it is expected that before nightfall such a stampede of useless reptiles from Fortress Monroe will take place as was never seen since St. Patrick purged Ireland. Two or three arrests have been made of parties who were warned to leave a day or two ago, but who thought they would take the risk of remaining or returning. Respectable folks here are delighted at the move, for, after the change from York River, we were infested by crowds of the most vulgar wretches that were ever let loose upon a community, and mainly composed of army hucksters. In saying this let it not be supposed that I am uttering anything against all army sutlers, many of whom I personally know to be gentlemen of high integrity and refinement; I merely allude to the dirty, swaggering, bullying, cheating, lying, swearing ruffians of the Bill Sykes school, who often get among them; men who, for a day or two of last week, made the Bygeen Hotel perfectly unfit for any decent person to live in, and who are enough to bring disgrace upon any calling, no matter how respectable. It was time for us to get rid of some of this class of gentry, when the officer engaged in taking lists assured me that the art of picking pockets had become quite flourishing in two or three days.

I am glad to say that the arrivals of sick and wounded at this port are beginning to fall off; I wish I could believe they had entirely ceased, for, Heaven knows, your pages have been sufficiently groaning under them for days past. Since the Elm City, of which I wrote you yesterday, I have not heard of any arriving up to this hour, though there may be before I close.

I am sorry to say we have had many cases here of soldiers trying to skirk their duties after return from furlough, and they look so strong a contrast to the manly endurance of the best of heroes of the Potomac army, that it becomes a public duty to condemn and shame as much as we can such conduct. It is a common trick to try, and get a medical certificate of illness or intoxicity; but all those who come in the Medical Director's hands, generally find they have got to the wrong man. Any one sitting in Dr. CURTIS' office in the fort, any five minutes during the day, is likely to hear an amusing dialogue somewhat after this fashion:

(Enter two sturdy soldiers, very stout, very red, healthy in appearance, but trying to look very feeble-debilitated.)

Dr. CURTIS, (in a brusque but kind tone, to first)—Well, Sir, what can I do for you to-day?

SOLDIER, (speaking slightly)—I'm very sick, doctor; I've chronic rheumatism.

Dr. C.—Chronic rheumatism, eh? My dear Sir, that disease is quite played out here. Try a little exercise with your brave brothers on the Yorktown River. Where do you come from?

SOLDIER—New-York, Sir, on furlough from furlough.

Dr. C.—From furlough, eh? How long?

SOLDIER—A month, Sir.

Dr. C.—So you get home and enjoy yourself a whole month, at your country's expense, return here to resume your duties, and just at the time your overwearied brothers are standing your inclination much, you come here to desert them. I put it to your own science, Sir, as a man, is this right?

SOLDIER—But if I am sick, Doctor?

Dr. C., (sternly)—No sick man made explanation to me, Sir. I know them too well, and their upon their being tended like children; but that is not your case. (Turning to the other)—What is the matter with you, Sir?

SECOND SOLDIER, (looking heavier than the first)—I am very sick, Sir.

Dr. C.—Have you been on furlough, too?

SECOND SOLDIER—Yes, Sir. We came together from New-York.

Dr. CURTIS—Strange, you weren't sick in New-York, but get sick directly you come back! Pray, how long have you been sick?

SECOND SOLDIER—Two days, Sir.

Dr. C.—Only two days, and you consider that enough to throw up your duties? Why, my dear Sir, I don't feel very well to-day, but you see I must keep to my post. Pooh! Pooh! I'm tired of this nonsense. (To his clerk)—Here, Mr. Sava, write an order for these two men. Tell —— that they have just returned from a month's furlough, and wish to rejoin their regiments.

(The papers are specially made out, and sent the two "patients," no doubt feeling that Dr. CURTIS is a rather wary one.)

I had the pleasure of meeting Col. E. BIDDLE ROBERTS yesterday, and of hearing from him some interesting accounts of the gallantry of our men in the several fights of Thursday, Friday and Monday, in which he individually took an active part. He engaged the enemy at Mechanicsville on Thursday, fought until night, and slept upon the field. Next morning he retreated, under orders, and was engaged again on Friday afternoon, when he came up to the relief of Pearson's men, who, as he said, "scunged them well." He then crossed the Chickahominy, and was engaged again on Monday, supporting Cosgrove's battery, which was lost and retaken twice, when he leaved by the gallant MAGRUDER, the enemy's colors being carried off, after terrible punishment. Col. ROBERTS—who was once Provost-Marshal of Washington—is returning home for a little relaxation after his arduous duties. He expects to be at such a favorite with his command as will all who come in contact with him.

Among the arrivals here is Acting Brig.-Gen. E. FERRAZZO and Staff, of the Second Brigade, Second Division of BURNSIDE'S Expedition. The friends of Col. E. FERRAZZO, of the Shepherd Rifles, at Palace Garden, New-York, will be glad to recognize their old friend in military and distinguished position. The General appears in good health, and ready to continue an active participant in the mighty struggle in which we are engaged.

I regret to record, among the list of deaths here, the name of Lieut. CHAS. S. BROOKS, a promising young officer, in only his 21st year, who was much beloved. His remains have been embalmed, and are forwarded to-day by the Baltimore boat.

Two schooners, with sutlers' goods and whisky on board, have been seized by the Coast Guard and confiscated—one last evening and one this morning.

Up to the time of mailing, no boat had arrived from Harrison's Bar, and, we are, consequently, without any intelligence whatever from the camps.

The weather continues insufferably hot. NEMO.

WOUNDED RHODE ISLAND SOLDIERS.

PHILADELPHIA, Wednesday, July 9.

One hundred and seventy-three wounded Rhode Island soldiers arrived here this morning, and were kindly attended to by those having the care of the Union Volunteer Refreshment Saloon, and were sent on their way home rejoicing.

REBEL PRISONERS.

BOSTON, Wednesday, July 9.

One hundred rebel prisoners from before Richmond, including 40 officers, arrived here to-day and were sent to Fort Warren.

ARMY AND NAVY INTELLIGENCE.

To-day another new man-of-war will be added to our navy afloat. The new steam frigate Minnesota is to be launched at Philadelphia, and the rest will Commodore STRAWN, who has presided at the "baptism" of so many naval vessels, will be one of the chief officers. The Minnesota is one of the six frigates ordered by Congress. The dimensions according to which she was to be constructed were length over all, 325 feet; extreme breadth of beam, 52 feet 2 inches; depth of hold, 17 feet 10 inches; measurement, 1,600 tons. She may vary a trifle from these figures.

The following are the casualties among the officers of the Twelfth Regular Infantry (the head quarters of which are at Fort Hamilton) in the late battles before Richmond:

Maj. Gilbert, wounded—now confined in Richmond.
Capt. M. M. Blunt, wounded.
Capt. P. Stanhope, killed.
Capt. F. Winthrop, wounded.
Lieut. C. R. Coster, wounded—prisoner.
Lieut. S. Van Rensselaer, wounded.
Lieut. W. B. Franklin, wounded.
Lieut. M. H. Stacey, wounded.
Lieut. J. J. Hecksher, wounded.
Lieut. C. F. Vandenzee, killed.

The Twelfth went into the fight five hundred and fifty strong, and came out one hundred and twenty. To fill up the decimated ranks, all the recruits and others now in the Department of the East have been led to expect orders for the field.

Mr. King, the Chief Engineer of the fleet under Com. DUPONT, has been relieved from that duty and ordered to Pittsburgh. Soon after the battle at Port Royal, Mr. KING established a machine-shop, foundry, smithery, &c., at that place, and ever since has repaired and refitted all the steamers of the fleet. Com. DUPONT says in an official letter that his services have been of great value to the Government.

Arrivals in the City.

Mrs. Gen. Sumner, Lt. S. S. Sumner and Mrs. Jenkins, Mrs. Gen. Worth and daughter, Thomas U. Walter, the architect; Major T. B. Halsey, of the United States army, and Capt. M. R. Marston, of the army, are at the St. Nicholas Hotel.

Hon. J. B. Robinson and family, of Cleveland, Ohio; Professor W. K. Pendleton, of Bethany, Va.; Major Kendrick, of the United States army; Major Hetson, Dr. J. C. Dallin, and E. B. Dallin, of the United States army, are at the Fifth-avenue Hotel.

Mrs. President Lincoln arrived in this City last evening, and with her servants proceeded to the Metropolitan Hotel, where apartments awaited her. Hon. J. M. Wood, of Maine; Col. B. S. Roberts, Capt. Parker, and Dr. E. L. Warner, U. S. A., are also at the Metropolitan Hotel.

Thurlow Weed, of Albany; Mrs. Gideon Welles and family, from Washington; Maj. N. Vedder, U. S. A.; D. J. H. Porter, U. S. N., and Col. J. Atwood, of Albany, are at the Astor House.

Capt. Glynn, U. S. N., and Capt. D. W. Burton, from Newburn, N. C., are at the Brevoort House.

THE NEW CALL FOR TROOPS.

How Adjutant-General Hillhouse's General Orders are Received.

The Objections Urged Against Them by Military Men.

Progress of Recruiting in the City and Elsewhere.

GENERAL ORDERS NO. 40.

The order on the subject of recruiting for the Regiments now in the service, issued yesterday from the office of the State Adjutant-General, does not appear to be received with that enthusiasm which under the circumstances, we consider. So far from enthusiasm, indeed, its effect has been to create in the minds of those who were starting themselves to raise fresh companies a feeling of deep dissatisfaction, not unmingled with bewilderment concerning its exact intent. With an appearance of explanatory minuteness, the order is in reality vague to a degree. Were this apparent the mere blundering of literary incapacity, the mistake it is causing might be speedily done and remedied; but there is a wide-spread impression that its composition is the result of purpose; that it is the game of an astute scheme, whereby those who do all the work of enlistment and organization will eventually be thrust aside for the advancement of political pets.

This impression may be erroneous. The State authorities may mean to honestly foster all legitimate efforts for speedily putting in the field the three hundred and fifty thousand which the country calls. But the fact nevertheless remains that they have gone the wrong way to work to effect that object. They have antagonized official disapprobation and contempt for any regulations were expressly made to conciliate public energy into cautious hesitation; possibly order into confusion, and still the order is replaced by one of more simplicity and candor, the business of enrolling new soldiers of a class worth having will be at a halt.

The main objection made to the system which the Order introduces is, that the enlistment business is taken out of the hands of the regular military officers, who have hitherto performed their duty faithfully and well, and is put under the supervision of District Commissioners composed wholly of civilians, and, in great part, at least so far as regards the members who will be more continually active, of politicians who are, some of them, more anxious that an officer, who is believed to be in the successful race for the regiments to be raised in the Congressional Districts, should be severally retired, than they will in the advancement of the officers, and the promotion of non-commissioned officers, have anything but a single eye to the good of the service. It is seen that great favoritism will be practiced, and that experience and ability will, in their estimation, inevitably tilt the beam when votes and primary elections come up for a decision on the opposite scale. These apprehensions may be unfounded, but they exist, they exercise a most paralyzing influence, and the order of yesterday should be got rid of, even though it delayed its popular reception.

There are several objections of the urgent nature, and of a minor character, which we only suggest for consideration; but it is mentioned that experienced officers they are not match for the unscrupulous wire-pullers with whom they are, in this instance, brought in contact, in the contest of patronage against patriotism, they always go to the wall, become disheartened, and finally retire in disgust.

Another objection we have heard made to the Order is the direction to commandants of companies to obtain Commissions to form some regimental organization forthwith. The word "forthwith" they say, precludes the possibility of their having any relation in the choice of Colonels; they may find themselves, when it is too late to necessarily withdraw, under the control of a man whom they know to be unfit for his position, or permanently hostile to themselves; disinclination to serve, or inability to satisfy, impede their own efficiency. Experience seldom decides that, under the old system, they knew what they had to expect, and could tell the men who came to them pretty well how they would be treated; but now they are completely in the dark—they have no reliable data whereon to canvass, and they are unwilling to peril their future welfare by deriving from the truth an assumption. The statement that Colonels will be appointed by the Commander-in-Chief for each regiment, "to be commissioned on its completion," does not alter this view of the case. These Colonels are appointed may be very excellent persons, worth the esteem of numerous friends and of recommendation to recruits; but who is to insure their obtaining commissions? They may be thrown overboard at the last moment, and their places supplied by men who are offensive.

Then the terms on which captains and lieutenants are to receive commissions are not at all explicitly set forth. The promise that a second lieutenant shall be commissioned on bringing in forty men, a first lieutenant on bringing in forty, and a captain on bringing in eighty-three, will admit of several interpretations. If each is to be commissioned for his specific number, there will be too many men for the officers, and a surplus of companies and part companies will be left. If, that one only be sent to Congress for official preferr who have had no share in the labor of collecting them. Those who really have to do the labor feel aggrieved at even the prospect of this. If, however, a company of eighty-three men entitles a captain, first lieutenant and second lieutenant all to commissions, appointments of lieutenants are primarily in the hands of captains, with power in the Commander-in-Chief to invalidate those appointments, if he pleased, and substitute men of his own choice. This would be a worse grievance than the other.

Whether these conceptions are all perfectly reasonable is not the question. So long as the opportunity remains for misunderstanding, so long will recruiting languish in the City; so long will the laudable ambition of energetic young men, from whose exertions we must look for the majority of recruits, be paralyzed. Let the order in all its objectionable parts be rescinded, and let its place be supplied by another order, with, shakeduse with a little more public spirit, can be framed in a manner less perplexing and more comprehensible.

RECRUITING IN THE CITY.

EFFECT OF THE LATE GENERAL ORDERS.

Business at the recruiting offices throughout the City, without showing any remarkable activity, had been, up to yesterday, satisfactorily brisk. It was not expected that organized endeavors would be made to raise companies, until orders from Albany had been promulgated, instructing officers on what terms enlistments would be permitted, and their own relative positions defined. Still, a great many superior men have been constantly enrolled. Native Americans, Irish and Germans have come in, in a steady stream—in numbers quite up to the anticipations of those who have had experience in the matter. It was thought that the publication of General Orders No. 40 would have given a decided impetus to the efforts of those engaged in inducing men to enter the service, and the returns of yesterday were confidently calculated to exceed all of the previous days—since the President's last requisition was issued—put together. Such did not, however, prove to be the case.

The orders seem to have produced a general feeling of distrust and doubt. They are evidently not suited to the emergency, or else they are misunderstood.

To exhibit the way in which the orders are regarded, the following conversation, had with an authorized captain of an incipient company, will afford a good illustration:

"You don't seem very busy to-day, Captain?"

CAPTAIN.—Busy! No. What's the use of trying to be busy?

"Why, what is the matter?"

CAPTAIN.—Matter! Who's going to work himself to death trying to raise men, when he doesn't know what will be done with him and them after he has raised them?

"You will be mustered in, of course."

CAPTAIN.—Not so sure about it. Have you read the Adjutant General's orders?

"Yes."

CAPTAIN.—Well, what do you make of them?

"Why, really—I don't exactly know."

CAPTAIN.—That's it. I don't exactly know. None of us exactly know.

This remark was made with sarcastic pungency.

"You see," continued the aggrieved Captain, "I'm not the only man who has gone to work in good faith, and who, if the order be rescinded, will be left in the lurch. Why, I know men who have left their business, and who are now in the hospitals, or in the ranks, who are now in the hospitals, or in the ranks, who are now in the hospitals, or in the ranks,

FIFTY-ONE [illegible] RESCUED FROM DROWNING [illegible]

The Commissioners of Excise met again yesterday, and granted fifty-one licenses, at $20 each, the majority being to "Inn Keepers." Mr. HASKETT, Chairman of the Board, offered a resolution, which was adopted, directing the Secretary of the Board to notify Congress that there were rolling through Brooklyn, without licenses, on pretence of being for medicinal use, that they must cease, or submit to prosecution and penalty for the violation of the law. The Commissioners are determined to carry out the law in its letter and spirit, and also to deal fairly by the Police Department, with which they seem to affect a great revolution in the morals and habits of the many thousands of dealers who have heretofore been allowed to carry on business in contempt for any venue they might commit.

European Intervention.

MOVEMENT OF FRENCH RESIDENTS IN NEW-YORK.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

Events follow each other with such rapidity that it is not time to make some comparatively trivial one that threatens to be the most dangerous of all that menace the Union. Is there any means of averting the calamity of European intervention, or rather, a coalition of Europe against America? In my opinion, there is. If we mean to do so, we must inquire into the different interests that have given birth to the project. England is, undoubtedly the nation most interested in attacking the Union by interfering in the American war. Therefore it is that the South has looked to her the most active agent of Secession. But it is impossible for her to interfere alone. For once at war with America, France would appear to her a very dangerous neighbor. Therefore, she has endeavored to associate the latter with her by forming a coalition of which the sword is offered to Napoleon III.

To attempt, by a public manifestation, to prevent France from accepting from her too generous ally the golden bridge prepared for her in this manner across the Atlantic, and to directly address the Emperor in the name of the bonds of friendship which unite the French and the American people, is, in my opinion, the surest means by which to defeat the projects of England, and so to overthrow the only remaining strength of the rebellion.

But, this manifestation must be made, not by the French in American slums, but by all the foreign resident in New-York and the other large cities of the Union. It will be received with enthusiasm by the people of France, who are opposed to any interference, and NAPOLEON seeing, by the return of the Orleans Princes, that there are on the battle-fields of the Union, neither laurels for aspirants nor material for the construction of thrones, will comprehend that the whole interest of France and of his dynasty rests essentially upon a good understanding with the greatest people of the New World. Therefore, to arrest the aim of France by a public manifestation, is to secure the safety of the Union, and bring about the failure of the project of European intervention.

As to the isolated intervention of England, it is scarcely probable, but, were it to take place, it would, in twenty-four hours, give a million of soldiers to the President of the United States.

Animated by these motives, I take upon myself the responsibility of calling a meeting, for the 15th of July, at 8 P. M., in Cooper Institute, of all foreigners residing in New-York, who share my views, and I respectfully invite them to notify me of their adhesion to the plan. It is in the name of France, my native country, and of the Union which is dear to me, that I call for this National movement. The project has already been received with sympathy by the American and with the vigorously accented. I hope, by both the American and foreign Press of New-York.

A Feasible Trick of the Gas Companies.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

They have to caution gas consumers against a trick which I have good reason to suspect is frequently practised upon them. In repeated instances we have had to stop a leak in the pipe passing out of the meter. As no one touches it but the company's agent, it is fair to infer that he gives the pipe a wrench intentionally, knowing that the gas that escapes from that pipe is charged to the house.

GENERAL CITY NEWS.

HOWARD LODGE, I. O. O. F.—ANNUAL CELEBRATION—ORATION BY A. L. SHAW.—The annual celebration of this Lodge, one of the oldest and most honored in the country, took place last night at Odd Fellows Hall, on the corner of Grand and Centre streets, in the presence of a crowded and delighted audience. Want of space compels us to a brief mention of the occasion, which, as belonging to one of the oldest in the country, deserves more than we have room to say. The orator of the evening was ALEX. L. SHAW, Esq., Ex-Councilman, and P. G. of the Lodge, and was worthy of himself and the occasion. From the statistical statement presented by the orator it appeared that the Lodge numbered now 457 members. That since their organization, twenty years ago, they had paid out in sick benefits and donations the munificent sum of $10,614, and have on hand now the sum of $7,744 53—a larger amount than can probably be claimed by any Lodge in the City of New-York. Apart from the allusions to the Lodge and the records of its doings, Mr. SHAW wandered off into the fields of patriotism, and brought down the plaudits of the assemblage by his eloquent allusions to the various Generals who are conducting our armies to victory in front of Richmond. The ceremonies of the evening here closed by a collation to the friends and ladies who had honored the occasion, which was worthy of the reputation of one of the most honored lodges in New-York.

NEW-JERSEY.

FOUND DROWNED.—The body of an unknown man was found at an early hour yesterday morning floating in the river near the Long Dock, Jersey City. Deceased was apparently about 25 years of age, with sandy hair, goatee, and had on a black cloth coat and pants, figured silk vest, heavy boots, and four shirts—two gingham, one woolen and one white muslin. The body had been in the water but a short time, and bore no marks of violence. It was viewed by Justice CURTIS, who, deeming an inquest unnecessary, gave a permit for burial.

JERSEY CITY AND HOBOKEN RAILROAD.—The Jersey City Common Council passed an ordinance on Tuesday evening, granting privileges to the Jersey City and Hoboken Horse Railroad Company to lay rails through certain streets of Jersey City for running of cars between the cities. The work will be commenced at an early day and pushed forward to completion as rapidly as possible.

FUNERAL OF LIEUT. CHASOTTE.—The funeral of Lieut. CHASOTTE, killed in the battle of Mechanicsville, will take place from St. Matthew's Episcopal Church, Jersey City, this afternoon at 5 o'clock. The Independence Guard and members of the Hudson Brigade, will attend.

ARRIVAL HOME OF COL. BAKER.—Col. H. M. BAKER, of the Eighty-eighth New-York Regiment, Fourth Regiment Irish Brigade, arrived at his residence in Jersey City, yesterday morning, seriously sick with the typhoid fever.

WEDNESDAY, July 9—P. M.

The most extraordinary excitement of the season prevailed on the Stock Exchange and among the Bullion and Foreign Bill Brokers, today. The additional rise in Gold from the average sales of yesterday, was made equal to five ⅌ cent., placing the price, at one time, at 116@116¼ ⅌ cent. The highest printed sales at the early Board were at 115¼ ⅌ cent. The eagerness to buy when Gold was called up rapidly advanced the bidding to this figure. The influence of the rise soon extended to the Railway Share list, and was also felt upon the Railway mortgages. The advance on the Share list was full 3 ⅌ cent. on New-York Central, and 1½@2 ⅌ cent. on Erie and the Western Shares. The strongest among the last named were Michigan Southern Guaranteed and Toledo. The demand for Toledo was in large parcels, at 49½@50 ⅌ cent. The demand for Erie Preferred was also firm at 64@64½ ⅌ cent. The 6 ⅌ cents of Tennessee and Missouri advanced 1@1½ ⅌ cent., and the Government Stocks and Treasury Bonds ¼@½ ⅌ cent.

"A fund of grain and flour has been coming into Buffalo since the commencement of navigation, and the imports are largely in excess of any previous year. The following comparative table will show the imports of flour and grain into Buffalo, from the opening of navigation to July 1, in the years 1860, 1859 and 1858, and from Jan. 1 to July 1, 1861:

NEWS OF THE DAY.

Our Washington correspondent announces the discovery of the commencement of a great rebel conspiracy, which was to have burst upon the country by the 4th of July with the great battles before Richmond. A rising was expected to take place in Tennessee, Kentucky and Maryland, and Jeff. Davis, in the meantime, was to march on Washington. The first part of the plan—the defeat of Gen. McClellan—failed, however, and consequently the rest was not attempted.

The Transcript of the First Connecticut Artillery has arrived in Washington, and it has recovered entirely from the attack of the Chickahominy fever and from the fatigues of the recent battles. He states that the First Connecticut Artillery and charge of all the siege guns of the army during McClellan's masterly retreat, and saved every gun. The guns were placed in positions on five different occasions during the retreat, and the artillery officers of the army thereby held the enemy in check until the position where the Commissary Department had ordered to secure was gained. The Transcript says that on Tuesday there was scarcely a day or two earlier, than it was promulgated here.

Gen. Jackson is likely to obtain a reputation for chiefly equal to that enjoyed by Baron Munchausen. A gentleman of Kansas, who arrived in Boston on Tuesday, states that the Government had received information from a scout, who had never been deceived, that the rebel Gen. Ewell was in the Shenandoah Valley at the time he was supposed to be in front of Richmond, attacking the right wing of our army. The scout [illegible] in the identity of the rebel commander.

From July 1 to July 4, when the truth became [illegible] Memphis was agitated by [illegible] from Southern sources, [illegible] before Richmond. Some had it [illegible] city had been surrendered, and on the other hand it was positively stated that Gen. McClellan had received dispatches from Gen. Halleck, by the aid of Jackson, he had [illegible] McClellan's right wing, and that the [illegible] army was in full retreat. The Memphis [illegible] of July 8 publishes the following dispatch, which contains full and conclusive evidence that [illegible] had early and detailed reports of Gen. McClellan's movements, which it withheld from the people of this section:

Cairo, Tuesday, July 1.

[illegible] dispatches received at Halleck's head-quarters state that McClellan had a fight on the [illegible] Richmond, the other was an attempt to [illegible] Rebels of McClellan being turned and cut to pieces, have no foundation in fact.

[illegible] reliable accounts of the battles on the [illegible] our readers will remember, were published in the Times of July 3, so that the people of Memphis had intelligence from official sources a day or two earlier than it was promulgated here.

The Columbus (Ohio) Journal, of July 2, learns that a meeting of the Governors of the loyal States has just been held at the Angler House, Cleveland, for consultation and cooperation in the matters appertaining to their positions and duties.

An enthusiastic meeting to pledge all the resources of the people to the Government was held in Philadelphia on Tuesday evening. Patriotic letters were read from Senators Wilmot and Cowan, and from J. W. Forney.

The ship Western Empire, from New-Orleans, arrived at this port yesterday afternoon. She has on freight 1,800 hogsheads sugar, 292 bales cotton, and 106 bales of moss.

A letter to the Philadelphia Press, dated Stono Inlet, S. C., July 1, has this very improbable piece of intelligence: "A rumor prevails here, creating great excitement, that the rebel battery on James Island has been attacked to-day by the Federal troops under the command of Gen. Stevens. The firing, it is reported, commenced shortly after 8 A. M., and at the present moment (3 o'clock) is said to be still going on."

The Grenada (Memphis) Appeal of the 27th says that a steamer arrived in a Southern port about the 23d, with 8,500 stand of arms and a large quantity of ammunition. The Nashville arrived safely out. Several other ships, it says, were en route for rebel ports, and have probably [illegible]

CONGRESS.

[illegible] The Senate yesterday, the bill to change the place of holding the U. S. Circuit Court for Western Tennessee, was reported back from the Judiciary Committee. A bill was also reported from the Judiciary Committee to amend the act to prohibit the Slave-trade, so as to authorize the President to make arrangements with foreign countries, and especially with Denmark, for the colonization of recaptured Africans. A bill to provide for the employment of persons of African descent in building intrenchments, and for other war purposes, was introduced from the Military Committee. A bill to provide another punishment for treason was introduced by Mr. Davis, of Kentucky, and referred to the Judiciary Committee. The resolution introduced several days ago, in relation to the expenses of the Senate, was laid on the table, after some debate. The Naval Grade bill was passed. The Fort-Scott bill, providing for a bridge across the Ohio River, at Cairo, Illinois, was passed. The bill introduced on Tuesday by Mr. Wilson, amendatory of the act of 1795, authorizing the President to call out Militia, &c., was taken up, and was debated at considerable length. Mr. Grimes, of Iowa, offered an amendment, in effect authorizing the enrollment of colored persons in the service of the Government. Mr. King, of New-York, opposed the amendment by authorizing the employment of colored persons only in building intrenchments, &c., and declaring such persons so employed free. Objections were advanced by Messrs. Saulsbury, of Delaware, Carlile, of Virginia, and other Border-State men. The subject was not disposed of when the Senate went into executive session.

In the House, the bill to promote the efficiency of the Corps of Engineers and the Ordnance and Quartermaster's Departments, was passed. A Committee of Conference on the Tariff bill was asked for. The Senate joint resolution in regard to the pay of Senators elected after the commencement of the Congressional term, was passed. The Senate joint resolution providing for the publication of contracts weekly in the Washington papers was also passed. The Senate bill supplementary to the District of Columbia emancipation act, making certain regulations in regard to non-residents, was passed after considerable opposition. The House soon afterward adjourned.

GENERAL NEWS.

The Democratic State Committee met at Albany yesterday, but did no business of public importance which has yet been divulged. A Conference meeting was held in the afternoon, which was attended by "Fernando" Wood and "Dickey" Seymour, and during which the determination was expressed to sink all local differences and present a "harmonious, unbroken front" at the State Convention.

A letter from Gen. Cowen to his family, in Taunton, Mass., dated at City Point, July 2, states that his command had arrived at that place, and were then in excellent condition. They were in the front and greatly exposed during the terrible fighting of Tuesday. His troops behaved nobly, the Thirty-sixth New-York took rebel colors at the point of the bayonet. Gen. Cowen had a horse twice shot under him and his coat was torn by a ball.

Intelligence has been received in Columbus that Maj. Lawson, of the Third Ohio Regiment, with one of his men, were captured by guerrillas while passing in Northern Alabama. All of their mules were hung.

The Fourth of July was celebrated with great spirit in Norfolk and Portsmouth. Salutes from the Minnesota, Decatur and other vessels of war in the harbor hailed the day, and a procession, under the auspices of the Union Association, after marching through the principal streets, went to the Opera House, where a large audience was assembled. Among those present were Col. Savage, of the Nineteenth Wisconsin; Major Sayers, of the First Delaware, and Col. D. W. Wagner, of the Ninety-ninth New-York, and Brig.-Gen. Viele, Military Governor of Norfolk. Gen. Viele made a brief address, and was followed by the orator of the day, Hon. H. S. Hawkins, of Wisconsin. A brilliant display of fireworks in the evening concluded the celebration.

The new United States Military Hospital at Newark, N. J., was declared ready for 700 inmates yesterday. Assistant-Surgeon Janeway, U. S. A., is in charge, and will be assisted by Drs. Crane and Baldwin, of Newark. There are now about 45 inmates, and about 400 more are on the way. We publish in another column a full description of the buildings and contents.

The Coroner's Jury, summoned to investigate the cause of the recent accident on the New-Jersey Railroad near Newark, has absolved the Company from all blame, as will be seen by the following verdict: "That Charles W. Tapp came to his death on the evening of the 6th inst., at 9½ o'clock, by being thrown from the cars of the New-Jersey Railroad, said cars being thrown from the track by a cow lying thereon; and, while the jury exculpate the Railroad Company from all censure, they would respectfully call the attention of the Common Council to an open violation of the ordinance prohibiting cattle running at large in the City of Newark. This accident has been the most serious one that has occurred on the New-Jersey Railroad for many years.

The Seventeenth Annual Commencement of St. John's College, at Fordham, took place yesterday, and was very largely attended. Vicar-General Wm. Starrs presided, in the absence of Archbishop Hughes, and a large number of the clergy were in attendance. The graduating class numbered thirteen.

An important decision in the case of the schooner Julia and cargo, has just been rendered by Judge Sprague, in Boston. The law of prize requires captors to send in the master of the captured vessel if possible. But by some mistake or oversight of Prize Officers of the Navy Department itself, our naval officers have merely been directed to send in "two of the captured crew." When the Julia was taken, the commanding officer of the Cambridge, who captured her, complied with these instructions by sending in two of the crew, but did not send the master. No claimants appeared. The Julia and her cargo appeared, on the face of her papers, to be neutral property, although there was some evidence tending to show a secret transfer just before sailing, and a suspicion existed (but there was no proof) that she was sold to rebels. Judge Sprague held that, in view of the omission of the Government and the captors to furnish the master's testimony, he must grant the delay of a year and a day for the claimants to appear, before ordering a condemnation.

In the Marine Court, yesterday, the death of Edward C. Ward, late Surrogate of this County, was noticed, and the Court adjourned.

There was extraordinary excitement in Wall-street yesterday in the markets for Gold, Foreign Exchange and Stocks. The price of Gold reached 117 ⅌ cent., and upon this Foreign Bills ran up to 158@159 on London, and the price of Stocks, generally, advanced from ½ to 2 ⅌ cent.

Influenced by the rapid rise in the price of Gold and of Sterling Exchange Bills, the market for Breadstuffs was unusually active yesterday, as exporters were buying freely, prices of Flour advanced 10c.@15c. ⅌ bbl., Wheat, 2c.@3c., and Corn, 1½c.@2c. ⅌ bushel. The day's receipts comprised 20,000 bbls. Flour, 88,000 bushels Wheat, 80,000 bushels Corn; the sales (including several large lots to arrive) amounted to 48,500 bbls. Flour, 400,000 bushels Wheat, 245,000 bushels Corn, and 24,000 bushels Rye; and the freight engagements (nearly all for British ports) included 15,000 bbls. Flour, 275,000 bush. Wheat, and 50,000 bushels of other kinds of Grain. Reducing the Flour to Wheat at the usual rate of five bushels to the barrel, these figures indicate the following as the result (in round numbers) of the day's movements in the articles named:

	Bushels.
Receipts equal to	268,000
Sales equal to	900,000
Exports equal to	400,000

The exports from this port during the week ending on Thursday comprised 97,500 bbls. Flour, 620,000 bushels Wheat, 199,000 bushels Corn, and 25,500 bushels Rye. The sales of Sugars, yesterday, were again large, and at a further improvement. Spices and Tallow were active and advancing. Whisky was in fair request, and was a shade dearer. Provisions were moderately inquired for, generally; [illegible]

The Intervention Panic.

The panic shrieks are doing a pretty good business just now. They have convinced Washington at least that foreign intervention is certain to take place immediately, and that the end of the rebellion is therefore indefinitely postponed. Some of these pleasant patriots accomplish their object by deprecating the Government currency—others by damaging the Administration; but quite a large proportion of them will not be satisfied until their predictions have secured their own fulfillment.

Nine-tenths of all this talk is groundless. The chances of "foreign intervention" have doubtless been somewhat increased by recent events before Richmond; but we see no reason whatever for believing that this intervention will come in any shape which will seriously affect the fortunes of the war. There has never been, in any influential quarter, any talk of any other intervention than what is implied in an offer of mediation; and Lord Palmerston has, within the last ten days, repeated what he has often said before, that, great as are the sufferings of the laboring classes in consequence of the rebellion, "interference in America can now only aggravate matters." This has been the uniform language of both the English and French Governments, and of all persons officially connected with either. There has never been the slightest hint of an armed intervention—or of any steps which could possibly be regarded as hostile, or even officious, by our Government. The utmost that has been suggested in any quarter, has been that, whenever it could be done with a prospect of good results, England and France would very gladly offer their friendly services to promote the restoration of peace between the North and South.

Even if they were to do this to-morrow, we do not see how any harm could result from it. It would not change in the least the relations of the two contending parties. Even if they were to recognize the Southern Confederacy as de facto independent—which, however, they cannot do without the most flagrant disregard of the plainest principles of International law and of their own uniform usage—they would not thereby augment its power of resisting our Government. Nor would they delay by an hour the fall of the rebel capital.

It may be said they will break the blockade, and in other ways give active and material aid to the rebel cause. To do this would be simply to declare war against the United States. Those who suppose that either England or France is ready for this, must know little of the reasons that decide the action of great nations. Both know very well that such a declaration, or any action equivalent to it, could have but one result. The war thus begun would be waged, with all the power we could command, at any sacrifice and so long as we had a dollar or a man to spare. They could unquestionably inflict upon us the most terrible injuries,—but this fact is by no means sufficient to determine their action. They would also bring down upon themselves the most serious disasters, and would entail upon their people the undying hatred and the relentless hostility of the United States. They have too just an appreciation of the resources of a new country, and the energies of a people who have made this continent what it is within a century, lightly to incur this hazard. They must experience some greater necessity than the lack of cotton before they will seek relief by such a resort.

The Saturday Review, which has been from the beginning among the most bitter and venomous foes of our Government, protests in the strongest terms against any intervention whatever, friendly or otherwise, jointly with France or by the English Government alone. It declares that it could not possibly do any good—that it would only exasperate still further the people of the United States, and render the prospect of peace more remote than ever; and that the mere chance of a war with America would involve far greater calamities than follow the loss of cotton. It says, also, that whatever might be the feeling of the people of Lyons in view of war, it would meet with no encouragement from the workmen of Lancashire; and that past experience in the Crimea, in China and in Mexico, does not encourage England either to join or follow France in foreign intervention of any kind. These sentiments are just and sound, and come from a quarter openly friendly to the rebel cause.

We have no fears of foreign intervention. We apprehend no trouble from abroad with which the skillful and masterly diplomacy of Secretary Seward will not safely and successfully deal. And we trust the attention of our people will not be diverted, by these false and mischievous alarms, from the real task that lies before them. The one thing needful is to take Richmond—to disperse and destroy the army which holds it. Whenever that is done, we shall hear nothing more of foreign intervention in the interest of secession.

Senator Doolittle on Arming Slaves.—The question of employing negroes as soldiers or as military laborers was again up in the Senate yesterday, and the debate upon it was very interesting. Senators Grimes, Sherman, Fessenden, Rice and Wilson spoke strongly in favor of arming the slaves; Senators Saulsbury and Carlile opposed it; Senator Collamer argued that the laws confined the militia to white men; Senator Davis opposed employing negroes as soldiers, but would use them as laborers; and Senator King, of this State, proposed to receive into the service persons of African descent, "for the purpose of constructing intrenchments or other camp service or labor for which they are fitted." The question was treated entirely in its practical bearings; and with a view to legislation for filling up the new requisition of troops called for by the President. The speakers were very serious; and their views were evidently greatly affected by the recent rebel doings on the Peninsula. There was strong opposition to what was called the "white-kid-gloved," "rose-water" mode of conducting the war; and Mr. Sherman argued that we could not fight against ser-

Secretary of War.

A very fierce crusade has been opened upon Secretary Stanton. Journals of all sorts, those which have been most clamorous, as well as others which have been more serviceable, in support of the Government, demand his instant removal. Perhaps they will get it, and perhaps not. Much of their abuse passes over Mr. Stanton's head and lights on the President. Probably that is the intention of some among them, though we believe they do not propose to remove the President.

We do not propose to take part in this high contest. Mr. Stanton has probably not proved wholly impeccable or infallible in his office; but the President will be quite as likely to know about his shortcomings and wrongdoings as anybody else. We would take his judgment in the premises quite as soon as the Herald's, and we propose to leave the matter, so far as we are concerned, wholly to his action.

One suggestion, however, we shall take the liberty of making. If we are to have a new Secretary of War, let us have a man who knows something about war. In times of peace a politician may discharge the duties of that office well enough; in times of war he cannot. Nine-tenths of all our troubles since the rebellion broke out, have grown out of the fact that the man who has had active charge of the whole war movement has known nothing whatever about it. He has known nothing about armies, nothing about tactics, nothing about strategy—nothing, either practically or theoretically, about any department of the vast machine which he has been required to work. It would have been miraculous if, under such circumstances, we had not had blunder upon blunder and disaster after disaster.

We beg the President, if we are to have a new Secretary of War, to give us a Soldier—one who knows what war is and how it is to be carried on. We shall then have some guarantee for intelligence and practical efficiency in this, which is just now the most important and responsible department of the public service. If Mr. Stanton is to be removed, the country will be reassured, and the public interest greatly promoted, by making Gen. McClellan his successor. Even those who cavil at his leadership in the field, do not question his mastery of the art of war.

Ill-Timed and Mischievous.

Senator Chandler has moved a call for copies of all correspondence between the Executive Department and Gen. McClellan. He does this avowedly for the purpose of fastening upon one or the other the responsibility for the recent disaster before Richmond; and he accompanied his motion by the most ill-timed and intemperate denunciations of both.

We hope this motion will not be pressed. If it is, we hope it will not be passed. And if the call is made, we hope the President will decline to answer it. This is not the time for such dissensions. They cannot effect the slightest good, and are certain to do very great mischief. Suppose Mr. Chandler should succeed in proving that the President is responsible for the repulse at Richmond; what does he propose to do about it? Will he appoint a new President? Will Congress, or the Senate, or Mr. Chandler himself take command of the armies of the United States? He must know that Mr. Lincoln is President, and that the country must rely upon him to carry it through this war. And he ought to know that whoever tries to destroy public confidence in him, does his best to weaken the Government, and aid the rebels.

Suppose, on the other hand, Gen. McClellan should be shown to have made mistakes; does Mr. Chandler propose to depose him? How will he bring about that result,—and what officer will he put in his place? Does he know of any officer who has not made mistakes during this war? Or has he some patent mode of securing Generals against the possibility of error? Does he know of any officer in the service who can fight 200,000 men with 100,000? Or can he name another who could save an army from destruction when menaced in front, flank and rear, as McClellan's was ten days ago?

Mr. Chandler may think he is rendering the country a service by plunging it into these bitter quarrels about the merits of men, while the Union cause just hovers on the brink of ruin. But he is very much mistaken. He is merely stirring up strife and dissension where thorough and hearty union is required. He is fanning the flame of party, when every consideration of the public good demand the united action of all loyal men. He is giving aid and comfort to the men in the Northern States who are [illegible]

Turning the Flank on Vicksburgh—Butler's Prestidigitation.

Gen. Butler, having straightened up things generally in New-Orleans, has, it seems, set to straightening the Mississippi River. It was Alexander, of Castile, we believe, who thought he could have given Providence some useful hints, had he been consulted in the framing of things. Gen. Butler goes a step further, and is determined to improve what is done; as he starts by mending the crooked ways of the Father of Waters. The story, as it comes to us, is so odd an affair, that we hardly know whether to believe it or not; but it reports that a canal is being cut across the neck of land opposite Vicksburgh, which will take the Mississippi several miles out of its present route, and leave Vicksburgh an inland town. It is well known that directly opposite this point the Mississippi makes an easterly bend of fourteen miles, returns on itself, and leaves a narrow peninsula of about three-quarters of a mile in breadth. Across the neck of the peninsula it is that the canal is being cut. Several thousand negroes are reported to have been at work on it for some time, and when completed, as it is to be immediately, it is expected that the Mississippi will leave its present bed, and cut a wide channel during high water; while Vicksburgh, from being a river town, will wake up and find itself half a dozen miles off in the interior!

Such is the Bennett story, more like a tale than a sober reality, that comes to us. But what is the object of this high piece of prestidigitation? There we were up to being completely stumped. They can hardly expect to take Vicksburgh by water after they have removed the Mississippi half a dozen miles away from it. That would be too much like the Hibernian jury on the question of building a new jail, which resolved: First—That the materials of the old jail be employed in constructing the new one; and 2d—That the old jail shall not be taken down until the new one be finished. Gen. Butler is hardly the man to make a practical bull of that kind, and yet meanwhile Farragut is firing away at Vicksburgh with his gunboats, as if he expected to take it by water. We have no doubt there is sound common sense (of the uncommon kind,) in the scheme; but for the present it is a greater mystification than anything Hermann or Houdin can show. Meantime, what will the "guardians of civilization" say? If throwing a few rocks into Charleston harbor raised such a howl, what will it be when they hear we have been turning rivers out of their courses?

The Confiscation Dead Lock.—The Senate has taken refuge from the perplexities of confiscation in another Committee of Conference. The House bill is too peremptory and stringent for the views of the Senators; the Senate bill is too lenient and impracticable for the sense of the House. Neither body shows the slightest disposition to recede. The vote by which the Senate, on Tuesday, declined doing so, showed the Chamber to be two to one against concession. Evidently the best thing to do in the circumstances is to dismiss the subject altogether. The policy, however modified, is a doubtful one. The measure is vindictive rather than preventive, and so offends a prime element of the doctrine of punishment. And Government, while it [illegible]

NEWS FROM WASHINGTON.

A Great Rebel Conspiracy Exploded.

THE NEW CALL FOR TROOPS

THE DOOR AGAIN OPEN TO SPECULATORS.

Debate in the Senate on the Employment of Negroes in the War.

OUR SPECIAL WASHINGTON DISPATCHES.

WASHINGTON, Wednesday, July 9.

A REBEL CONSPIRACY DISCOVERED.

Evidences have reached the Government of a well-planned rebel conspiracy, of a most extended character, which was to have burst upon the country simultaneously with the battles at Richmond. The rebel leaders confidently relied on chasing off McClellan and annihilating his army by their immensely superior numbers, and this success was to be immediately followed by a rising in Tennessee, Kentucky and Maryland, and the advance of Jeff. Davis upon Washington in the midst of the confusion. The families of rebel officers who are living in Kentucky, while their heads are in position in Richmond, were fully informed of the scheme, and in their boldness did imprudence let it out. The facts were communicated to the War Department and to Gen. Boyle, of Kentucky, and precautions were made to detect the movement; but the utter failure of the rebels to break the power of the Union army now threatening Richmond make it impossible for them to put their plan in motion.

THE DOOR OPENED TO SPECULATION.

The determination of the War Department to place the entire control of the new enlistments in the hands of the Governors of States, in the matter of ordnance stores, clothing, subsistence, &c., till mustered into the United States service, opens the door to infinite speculating contracts and frauds that the Government has, by legislation, worked itself clear of. All the States will be competitors against each other, in the market, and exorbitant prices will be put on all military goods. Mr. Holt, whose experience has made him so familiar with this subject, thinks that the profligacy of the past will be exceeded under the State Administrations, competing against each other.

GEN. POPE'S ARMY.

The Washington Star, of this evening, says: "We have now at Front Royal quite a division of Gen. Pope's army."

A LETTER FROM GEN. M'CLELLAN.

The correspondence between the War Department and Gen. McClellan, was, to-day, transmitted to the House, in response to a resolution of inquiry. Gen. McClellan says, in the course of his explanations:

"Those who have originated the false statements concerning the White House yard and spring, are in fact, as stated in my dispatch of the 7th inst., enemies of this army and the cause in which it is fighting. They have imposed upon the Surgeon-General, and caused him to make official statements which, upon examination, prove to be unfounded in fact, and which are disrespectful to his superior officer. They have unnecessarily occupied the attention of the Secretary of War, and have interrupted the Commander and the Medical Director of this army in the midst of the most arduous duties."

CONGRESS.

Congress preserves its constitutional existence with difficulty. Before the week expires there will be no quorum present.

MEETING OF REPUBLICAN MEMBERS.

The Republican members, between 30 and 40, comprising both Senators and Representatives, held an informal meeting to-night at the Capitol. Dr. Sherman, of New-York, was Chairman, and Samuel C. Fessenden, of Maine, Secretary. Remarks were made by Messrs. Sherman, Foster, Kellogg, of Illinois, Arnold, Lane, of Kansas, and Dawes, when, on motion of Mr. Sherman, a resolution was adopted for the appointment of a Committee of five members of the House and an equal number of Senators to prepare an address to be submitted to an adjourned meeting Saturday evening.

REBEL BOMBAST.

A late copy of the Richmond Examiner says that "the rebels could certainly cut off McClellan's retreat, but it would be far better to prevent him receiving further supplies, and starve him into a capitulation." It remarks: "Fit up our armies and prepare for a contest as long as our enemy may choose to urge it, and let it be as energetic as we can make it."

A RUBLE DISTRICT.

The district represented by Mr. Arnold, of Illinois, has now 15,000 troops in the field, and he will, immediately on the Adjournment of Congress, return to Chicago and aid in promptly filling the call of the President for additional troops.

THE POSTAL CONVENTION WITH MEXICO.

By the recent Postal Convention with Mexico, proclaimed by the President on the 20th of June, 1862, the following rates of postage are established:

First—The single-letter rate (sencillo) three cents and one cent (cents) is ten cents per half ounce, and for each fraction over, an additional rate, and prepayment is required. This applies to all letters sent to Mexico from the United States by sea.

Second—On all letters received from Mexico by sea, the United States domestic rate of postage is to be charged, using them at the first United States Post-office at which they are mailed to their destination, either three or ten cents per single rate. This is to be collected on delivery.

Third—On all letters sent to or received from Mexico, when not conveyed by sea, the United States domestic postage only of three or ten cents the single rate is to be charged. This must be prepaid at the mailing office on letters sent, and collected at the office of delivery on letters received.

Fourth—The sea rate on printed matter sent to Mexico is one cent for each newspaper, and one cent per ounce, or fraction of an ounce on all magazines and periodicals, publications and other printed matter; and this is to be added when sent by sea to our usual inland rate of postage, and this combined rate must be prepaid at the mailing office in the United States. When sent by land, the United States inland rate of postage only is to be charged, and prepaid at the mailing office.

Fifth—On all such printed matter received from Mexico, the United States domestic rate of postage is to be charged, using the first United States Post-office at which they are mailed to their destination, either three or ten cents per single rate. This is to be collected on delivery.

Sixth—These regulations must be strictly observed, as no exceptions are kept with the Mexican Postal Department.

FROM THE LOWER MISSISSIPPI.

The recently published dispatch from Capt. Craven, to Commodore Farragut, mentioned the preparations of the rebels to annoy our fleet by a battery in the vicinity of Ellis Cliff and Rodney, Miss. Acting-Master Crocker communicates the particulars of an encounter on the morning of the 30th.

"When we were attacked by a battery of apparently two or four 6-pounders, concealed in the thicket under the bluff. Their first shot, from a distance of not more than two hundred yards, took effect in the Sarah Bruen, injuring two of her crew severely. These other shots, fired at almost the same distance, fell short, when a round of grape from the Sarah Bruen, and a shell from the Kensington, both of which were dropped with great accuracy into the midst of the smoke of their guns, silenced them completely. Both the Sarah Bruen and the Kensington, together with the rifleman from all the vessels, continued firing till the curve round the turn brought them out of range, and enabled the Horace Beals to open fire with her battery, which she did with great animation, and the thicket was shelled until all vessels were out of range."

ARMY ORDERS.

Capt. W. F. Barry, of the Corps of Topographical Engineers, was to-day confirmed by the Senate as Brigadier-General. The nomination had been pending since August last. It is known that he has been acting as Brigadier-General of Volunteers in the Army of the Potomac.

The resignation of Col. Thomas F. Gantz, Aid-de-Camp to Gen. McClellan, has been accepted by the President, to take effect the 8th inst.

Maj. J. Watts de Peyster, Jr., of the First New-York Artillery, will report to Gen. McClellan.

Assistant-Surgeon Joseph R. Smith will report in person to the Surgeon-General, for duty in his office.

Assistant-Surgeon Clement Wagner, assigned to duty in Washington, to take charge of the general hospital in Judiciary-square.

Assistant-Surgeon J. C. Nichols will report in person, for duty, to the Surgeon-General.

Brigade-Surgeon Blackman will report for duty to the commanding officer of the army of the Potomac.

Brigade-Surgeon Edward McDonnell will report for duty to Major-Gen. Sigel.

Brigade-Surgeons Charles Allen and Thomas B. Catlin will report for duty to the commanding officer, Department of the South.

SECESSION PRISONERS.

A number of secession prisoners reached Washington, to-day, and the Government was disgraced by a generous "missing" of them by Secessionists in our midst. It should be the costliest wine ever bought by domestic traitors.

A SERENADE.

Gen. Lew. Wallace, of Indiana, is to be serenaded to-night, at the National.

A CORRESPONDENT BELIEVED.

Sam. Wilkeson, of the Tribune, whose recent letters from the army of the Potomac have so much surprised his friends and the journal he represented, has been granted leave of absence. He is in Washington, on his way to his farm in the interior of New-York.

THE PROCEEDINGS OF CONGRESS.

SENATE.

WASHINGTON, Wednesday, July 9.

Mr. Foster, of Connecticut, (Rep.,) from the Judiciary Committee, reported back the bill to change the place of holding the Circuit Court of the United States, so far as the District of West Tennessee is concerned. Passed.

Mr. Foster also reported from the same Committee a bill amendatory of the act to prohibit the Slave-trade.

The bill authorizes the President to make arrangements with foreign Governments, and especially with Denmark, for the colonization of captured Africans.

Mr. King, of New-York, (Rep.,) from the Military Committee, reported a bill for the employment of persons of African descent, building intrenchments and for other war purposes.

Mr. Davis, of Kentucky, (Union,) introduced a bill to declare another punishment for the crime of treason. Referred to the Judiciary Committee.

On motion of Mr. Sherman, of Ohio, (Rep.,) the resolution in relation to a quorum of the Senate was taken up.

Mr. Sherman urged the passage of the resolution as a matter of necessity, and to relieve the Senate from the danger of being left without a quorum at any time by the withdrawal of one or two members. He argued there could be no constitutional objections to the bill.

Mr. Carlile, of Virginia, (Union,) argued against the passage of the resolution as giving to two or three States the power to legislate for the whole country. This was entirely against the provisions of the Constitution.

The President pro tem. had a paper read expressing his views on the subject, arguing that, according to the Constitution, no State could be destroyed, and that the "quorum" provided for in the Constitution meant a majority of the whole number of Senators from all the States. He cited various cases of the action of the Senate as precedents in favor of this position.

The subject was further discussed by Messrs. McDougall, of California, and Foster, of Connecticut, when—

Mr. Grimes, of Iowa, (Rep.,) moved to lay the resolution on the table.

The motion was carried by Yeas, 19; Nays, 18.

The Naval Grade bill was taken up and passed.

On motion of Mr. Wade, of Ohio, (Rep.,) the Post-route bill, providing for a bridge across the Ohio River at Steubenville, was taken up.

Mr. Cowan's amendment to make the "draw" 300 feet instead of 270, was agreed to.

The bill was passed.

The report of the Conference Committee on the bill making an appropriation for sundry civil expenses was agreed to.

On motion of Mr. Wilson, of Massachusetts, (Rep.,) the bill amendatory of the act of 1795, calling forth the militia, &c., was taken up.

Mr. Grimes offered an amendment as a new section, that there shall be no exemption from the performance of military duty under this act by reason of any militia law of the United States on account of color or lineage; that whenever the militia shall be called into the service, all loyal able-bodied male persons shall be called into the defence of the country; that when the militia shall be called into the service of the United States under this or any other law, the President shall have power to organize them into battalions, regiments, brigades and divisions, according to race or color, as he may believe the public interest requires, and that the provisions of the preceding sections shall be construed so as to apply to and include volunteers who may hereafter be called into the service of the United States; and all persons who have been, or may hereafter be enrolled in the service of the United States, shall receive the same pay and rations as the soldiers are now allowed by law, according to their respective grades.

Mr. Saulsbury, of Delaware, (Dem.,) thought that this attempt to elevate the miserable nigger and carry on the war in this way, was never intended by the people. It would not restore the Union.

Mr. Carlile, of Virginia, (Union,) thought that if negroes were not recognized as militia by the Constitution of the United States or the State Constitutions, Congress had no right to make them militia.

Mr. King, of New-York, (Rep.,) moved to amend Mr. Grimes' amendment by striking out all but the provisions in regard to rations, &c., and insert two sections of the bill introduced by him, authorizing the President to receive into the service of the United States, for the purpose of constructing intrenchments or other camp service or labor for which they are fitted, persons of African descent, and such person shall be enrolled under proper regulations, and where any man or boy of the African race renders such service, his mother, wife and children shall be forever free, and appropriating ten millions of dollars to carry this into effect.

Mr. Saulsbury thought that this was only a general scheme for emancipation.

Mr. Sherman, of Ohio, (Rep.,) said the question was whether the negroes should only be employed to help the rebels. The time had arrived in his (Sherman's) judgment when the military officers of the United States should be compelled to call into the service all loyal men to suppress the rebellion. Heretofore, these negroes had only worked for the rebels, doing all the labors of the camp for them. He (Sherman) was for giving the President power to call into the service all the slaves of the rebels. He would not interfere with loyal men in loyal States. This Union must be preserved. Rather than it should be destroyed, he would organize a great army of black men and desolate every Southern State. He was willing to pass a conscript act, if necessary, and we might as well draft negroes as any one else. We had a right to call the negroes into the service of the United States.

Mr. Collamer, of Vermont, (Rep.,) said that the reason the States had not called negroes into the military service was because the Republican United States prefered the militia to white men.

Mr. Sumner contended that all the people of the country, without distinction of color, were liable to be called into the service of the country, if circumstances required it. We must, to a certain extent, follow the bad examples of the rebels and introduce energy into our military movements. These rebels resort to all sorts of expedients, and make the negroes work and fight. When that is done cannot we employ negroes to market service for us. They hang Union men, but we must not talk of hanging traitors. In such a way we will never end this contest, and he thought the time had come when we should carry the whole force of the Government in earnest and put down the rebellion. Unless we do this we shall never succeed. We cannot war against savages unless we become part savage ourselves.

Mr. Fessenden, of Maine, (Rep.,) This bill, Sir, is thought to be an object of necessity, and is designed, as I understand it—and we may as well tell the truth about it, for we have nothing to conceal here—to meet any possible contingency which may be supposed to arise from any difficulty in raising troops by enlistment at once, as soon as they may be required; and, therefore, it is proposed to give the President power to call out the militia, and to call on all loyal persons, without distinction of color, for such a time as to make their services available. That is the position, and, Sir, I am in favor of this bill. If it is thought advisable by the Committee on Military Affairs to pass it. I don't know, Sir, but it may be necessary to go a step further, and to provide specifically for calling out men by drafting. And I am ready to do that if it is thought advisable. It is not advisable at this moment, but as Congress is to adjourn very soon, I understand that by this bill it is proposed to meet any contingency that may arise during the adjournment of Congress, and as such, I think it a wise and precautionary measure. But, Sir, it may be worth while to inquire why this contingency is possible, and we may as well look the matter in the face. It is because apprehensions are entertained that there will not be that readiness to enlist that there was heretofore, and I am perfectly willing to state here, that in my own State there is not that readiness to enlist. There is not that enthusiasm with regard to enlistments. Have they lost any interest in the war? Not a particle. Have they lost anything of that determination which existed formerly to do anything and everything which may be necessary to put down this rebellion? Not at all. Not in any shape or form. But they do feel, Sir, that the war must be conducted upon some different principles than those upon which it has been conducted hitherto; that it is time, there should not be, on the part of the military authorities of the country that extreme tenderness and delicacy toward men who have no tenderness in no except that of the wolf toward the lamb; but they should be met. It is in the same spirit, yes in a spirit able to resist and conquer them. Sir, our soldiers do not like it, and they do not feel easy when they are called upon, without any necessity, to stand guard over the enemy's property and protect it, while they are fighting against us, and be shot down by concealed traitors while they are doing this. They do not feel that it is just to them that they, who have volunteered to fight the battles of their country, should be compelled to dig ditches and throw up intrenchments, exposed to all the miserable consequences of such a sort of life about the swamps of the Chickahominy or elsewhere, while at the same time there are numbers and abundance of men acclimated, who are ready to volunteer their services to do the same work, and thus save our soldiers. Now, Sir, I speak this as a truth which is well understood, and the Government of the United States and the military authorities of the United States may as well understand that if the policy is to be followed, and we are not to avail ourselves of the services of men who are too ready to render all these services, out of tenderness to rebels, and traitors, and murderers, that the people will hesitate to come forward until they know and feel that they are no longer to be exposed to that kind of life. Sir, why is it so? Why are we so tender toward these traitors? What makes some gentlemen so sensitive the moment we speak of employing negroes and the slaves of rebels in the service of the country? Men who profess to feel, and I am willing to believe do feel the deepest interest in the salvation of the country, why do they jump at their feet the moment the idea is proposed that there are foreign men who are ready and willing and able to perform these services to save the lives of soldiers of their own and other States? What violation of the principles of warfare is proposed? Why should we not weaken the enemy, and attack him in his weakest point? Do you say we are proposing an abolition or emancipation scheme? Not at all. We are simply proposing to use those means in the army which are best for us, and to use those best able to perform a particular kind of service. Did anybody ever hear of a nation that was at war with any other country that would sacrifice the lives of their own men by making them do a kind of work when there were about them friends who were willing and anxious to relieve them from that work? And out of what consideration? Why, Sir, I have been utterly at a loss to imagine any. I cannot conceive the slightest ground for it, or reason why the men who come to our camps and tender their services against the enemies of the country, should be repelled and driven out, and our own soldiers sacrificed in performing a duty these other men are so ready to perform. Why, Sir, it is contrary to every principle of warfare. I am not a soldier, but I undertake to say that a General who conducts a campaign on such principles is no General at all. He has forgot or never knew the first principles upon which to conduct a war, which is to weaken the enemy and strengthen himself. I have looked upon this thing quite as long as I feel disposed to. I do not feel disposed to blame anybody, and I have no doubt, not the slightest in the world, that everybody feels as anxious as I do to close this war, and to close it effectually. But I do say that a mistake has been made in this thing. Too great tenderness has been used, under the delusive idea that these rebels were to be coaxed back by tenderness. Sir, you cannot deal with savages in that way. And the man who deliberately sets himself to work to overthrow the institutions and interests of the country for the purpose of selfish ambition is worse than a savage. And such is a description of the leaders in this rebellion, and the great mass of their followers are uneducated and willing to follow those about them. Now, Sir, are we to go on in this way? If we do, the consequences must be well understood by the Government, the President, the Cabinet, Generals, or whoever else sanctions this mode of proceeding. They must reverse their course, or let me say, however public opinion may sustain the war, it will not sustain them. And, Sir, this is not from any feeling for Abolition or Emancipation, or any sort of peculiar sentiment which gentlemen are so fond of ascribing to those on this side of the chamber, but from the absolute necessity of the case, from the common sense of the other. Let me ask my friend from Delaware (Mr. Saulsbury) if he was engaged in a contest where his own life was in peril, and the servants of his enemy should come to him and say: "We will give you aid that may save you, dig trenches, or do anything for you," would he repel them? Any man who would act thus has not even common sense, and has not capacity to manage his own affairs. I have said thus much, Sir, simply to illustrate my idea, which is this, that we expect the people of this country to come forward willingly under any pressure except the absolute necessity, with their whole hearts and souls, to fight the battle out. I tell the President, in my place here as a Senator, and I tell Generals of our army, that they must reverse their practice and their course. I know that in some quarters I am called a Conservative, and I believe I am. I do not say things here without full deliberation, and I say this after full reflection, because I think it ought to be said, and to be said in public. It is my opinion that this white kid-glove warfare won't do. We must act upon common sense principles, and do what all men would do in such a case—avail ourselves of all the means which the Great Ruler of the Universe has placed in our power to overwhelm these scoundrels who are thus making war upon us, upon civilization, and upon humanity. I would do nothing that a Christian and civilized nation ought not to do. I would not employ savages, and bring back the days of the tomahawk and the scalping-knife. I would not employ these negroes unless I could control them. But everything that is within the usages of civilized warfare I would do, and I think it ought to be done. There is another thing which I think there has been a mistake made, that is, trying to deceive the people by calling a defeat a great strategic movement, and by giving false names to things, under the idea that it will not do to give the people of the country the truth, just precisely as it is. That is just what ought to be done; tell the people the truth, and resort to no artifice or concealment. Of course I do not speak of those concealments which are necessary to conceal facts from the enemy. But the idea of deceiving to tell the free and intelligent people of this country precisely what the state of things is, and what is needed to effect their purposes, is an illusion and folly. The people of my State and the people of this country are intelligent, reading people, and they are the people who support this war; their hearts are in it as much as ours. Let them know, then, plainly, what your necessities are, and what will be required of them. I was very much amused the other day at seeing an address of the Governors of the different States addressed to the President, requesting him to call out more troops, for they thought it might be necessary in the course of coming events. What did it all mean? It meant that the President and the Government thought that they needed more troops; that our ranks had been thinned by disease and the enemy. Didn't we all know it? Didn't the enemy know it? Didn't everybody know that we wanted more men? Then why not say so? Now, and quick, tell the truth—why we want them, and how soon? Appeal to the people, and let them know what we require for the purposes of the country. Deal with them honestly, and you will get a response from every true Northern heart. Therefore, I hope this policy will be abandoned, and hereafter we shall speak the truth. I have not stood up here to condemn any man, or this or that General, or the President. I respect the President. I have stood by him, and I shall stand by him. I have done all I could and contributed all I could to the support of this war and of our Generals, and I shall continue to do so. If they make mistakes, I can forgive them. Men are not always wise, or able to do the very best things. If they do the best they can, I can bid them God speed and go on to fight this battle till they conquer. But tell me the truth, and treat your enemies as enemies and the worst of enemies. Avail yourselves, like men, of every power which God has placed in your hands to accomplish your purpose, within the reach of civilized warfare. But the man who tampers with this question, and who talks against employing negroes for services which they are ready and able to do, leads me to doubt, sometimes, whether he is, in fact, true to his country and to the Union. The people are willing, and they will do anything you require of them. But they want to know what you want them to do. If you want them to do it with heart in it, tell them what you want, and they will do it. If you want them to do it with heart in it, tell them what you want, and they will do it. If you want them to do it with heart in it, tell them what you want, and they will do it

LAW REPORTS.

The Summary of civil cases for the week—In equity—Chancellor A. V. Parker, Ordinary—Decisions.

SUPREME COURT—GENERAL TERM.

Before Justices Sutherland, Leonard and Clerke.

Thomas C. Cardwell vs. John J. Hicks.—In this case the plaintiff had a demand against one Wirgman for about $600—money borrowed by Wirgman for him—which he discharged, taking of Wirgman the defendant's note for $517 50, and paying to him (Wirgman) the balance of the note over and above enough to discharge the defendant claim, in money, before maturity. The plaintiff sued upon the note, the defence being that there was fraud in the inception of the note, and the proof being that it was diverted from the use for which it was made.

The question, therefore, on the trial, was whether a person who takes a note that has been diverted from the use for which it was made, and pays for it partly in cash, and partly by giving up the note of the person from whom the purchase is made, is a bona fide holder for value.

Upon the trial the Court charged the jury that if they believed that the plaintiff paid a part of the note in cash without knowledge of the fraud alleged by the defendant in the making and issuing of the note, he became thereby a bona fide holder, and entitled to recover the whole amount with interest; and that the defendant had no defence to the part taken for a precedent debt.

The verdict was for the plaintiff, and judgment was entered thereon. From that judgment appeal was taken to this Court, wherein it was now held per Leonard, J., that the holder can claim protection from the defence of a party whose note or other negotiable mercantile obligation has been obtained by fraud, only to compare his money or other valuable or substantial consideration, and receive his judgment upon the faith of it, and where the holder will lose no right of which he was possessed when he obtained the note, and will be fully reinstated in the position to recover, there is no reason why such a holder for value, and the equitable of the party whose note has been obtained by fraud will be preferred. The rule was considered such a case, and a new trial was ordered, Justice CLERKE concurring.

Justice SUTHERLAND dissented, holding that whenever a negotiable note is taken in good faith before it becomes due, in payment of a precedent debt, or discounted, and the evidence of such indebtedness is surrendered or destroyed, the person taking such note becomes a bona fide holder for value, and entitled to protection. Such a case is different from the case

THE HOME HOSPITAL IN NEWARK.

Wednesday, July 9, 1862.

Description of the Hospital Recently in the Country House for Over Seven Hundred Patients.

Mainly through the efforts of a benevolent and lady[illegible] citizen of Newark, Mahlon I. Wade, there is now in successful operation in this city one of the most complete army hospitals yet established, capable of accommodating over seven hundred patients. The buildings are situated in the Clinton-street Depot, fronting on the river, and are occupied that afforded by silk cushions brought by either the owners the hospital in their beds with the exception of the [illegible] Thus are in all three spacious large stories and basement high, and covering about 100 feet square of ground. They were erected for a large manufacturing house at a cost of over $100,000. On the reception of the news of the battle of Williamsburgh, Mr. Mahlon I. Wade, [illegible] under the auspices of the State, in the use of the and wounded soldiers of the State of New-Jersey, and particularly of the society of Newark. Arrangements for the purpose were speedily made, and in connection with other benevolent gentlemen and a number of [illegible] ladies, the hospital was started. Local jealousies of other cities in the State, together with, perhaps, some political interference, prevented the successful working of the institution, but, nothing daunted, Mr. Wade and his associates brought the matter before the War Department. The admirable location, and perfect adaptability of the buildings, and the success of the preliminary movements, immediately convinced the Department that the location was invaluable. The building and grounds were therefore leased by the Government, and placed under military rule; John H. Janeway, Assistant Surgeon, U. S. Army, being placed in sole charge. Under Dr. Janeway's administration, the preparations are now complete for the accommodation of 700 patients.

Each room is splendidly lit and ventilated by numerous windows. The ceilings are about ten feet high. Each patient is provided with a springlessness bedstead, straw mattress, hair pillow, sheeting and blankets in abundance. The gas and water is introduced in every ward. There are likewise a number of baths, so that there can be no excuse for uncleanliness. In order to remedy the lack of a suitable force to carry the water all over the higher rooms, huge tanks are erected in the upper stories, forming an ever-ready reservoir, and giving the [illegible] to supply all the upper stories as rapidly as needed. The stores are all new and excellently arranged so as to avoid giving the least offence. The arrangements for cooking are all on the most extensive scale, suited to the maximum of inmates. The Commissary has now 10,000 rations on hand, so that there is no danger of the patients starving. Dr. Janeway, of course, regulates his Hospital fund, as is the plan at all other United States military posts, using the savings of surplus rations to purchase delicacies. Thus far, however, he has had no occasion to acknowledge the utmost liberality on the part of the Ladies of Newark in sending in contributions for the sick. The ladies have been even so thoughtful as to promise to supply the Hospital with milk, butter and eggs, and in every ward out the sun's rays where they are not wanted, are making several hundred window curtains. Dr. Janeway has arranged for all the convalescent male nurses who may be required, and will, as the exigencies of the Hospital suggest, employ female nurses as well. Rooms are set apart for the office, dispensary, post-office, stores and all other purposes, for which purposes they are needed, and yet the patients will have abundance of room.

No intelligence has yet been received by land or water. Boats dressing [illegible] land at the pier, and the patients who are able to walk be moved on their stretchers to the hatchway, noticed to the appropriate wards and lowered into their beds. In the building near the railroad there is a large dumb-waiter, worked easily by means of a windlass, by which invalid soldiers, or supplies, may be readily moved from one ward to another. In fact, the entire arrangements are as complete as could possibly be devised in a building not erected for the purpose. The following were issued yesterday:

RULES AND REGULATIONS.

1. No patient will be permitted to leave the hospital without a pass from one of the medical officers. The time he is allowed to be absent is to be stated in the pass.

2. No nurse will be permitted to leave the hospital without permission from the medical officer. No one will be allowed to be absent after 9 P. M. without permission, in writing, of the medical officer. A list of all who have permission to be absent will be kept, for reference, by the clerk.

3. No one will be allowed to spit on the floors or walls of the hospital; to make any stops on the floors, or to throw any rubbish on them.

4. The beds will be made every morning by the attendants, or officers, if necessary. Patients able to do so will, however, make their own beds.

5. No one will be allowed to lie on the beds with his shoes on.

6. Every patient able to do so, must wash his face and hands every morning, and keep the rest of his body in a cleanly condition.

7. No loud noises will be allowed in the wards at any time; all talking will cease at 9 P. M., when all patients and nurses, except those of the latter on duty, will go to bed.

8. All lights in the hospital, except in the office and storeroom, will be lowered at 9 P. M.

9. No patient will be allowed to eat or drink anything brought to the hospital, without permission of the medical officer.

10. No person will be allowed to enter the hospital, except such as may be admitted by order of the medical officer.

JOHN H. JANEWAY,
Assistant Surgeon, U. S. A.

Newark, July 9, 1862.

Drs. Nesmoss and Jackson, of Newark, were at first appointed Assistant Surgeons in the army and detailed to this hospital. Both gentlemen had been very active in founding the institution and helping it along; but their extensive private practice would not admit of their continuing. They, therefore, resigned, and Drs. Cross and Ballwin have been appointed in their places. There have been treated in the building altogether 187 patients. There are now under treatment 45, mostly from the battle of Williamsburgh.

A most interesting scene took place, yesterday, upon the occasion of the departure of 31 of the recovered men to rejoin their regiments. Parents and friends, wives and children, collected in large numbers, and the scenes of the first departure were repeated. Newark has sent her 3,000 to 4,000 men to the field, and her inhabitants know well what may be the fortunes of war.

There are now about 400 patients on the way to this hospital from the James River, and as many of our readers may have friends to see, we subjoin the regulations for visitors:

U. S. HOSPITAL.
Open for visitors from 10 A. M. to 5 P. M. on Wednesday and Saturday.
Subject to the orders of the Medical Officer.

Each visitor must register his or her name, and receive a ticket from the officer in charge. Not the least attention to the convalescent as well as to the sick, is the splendid view which presents itself from any of the upper windows. The fields, foliage, expansive plains, the winding river and the distant mountains, blended in a picture of beauty, delightful to behold. Dr. Janeway will find his location more pleasant than his late station on our Western frontier.

Mr. M. C. Wade and his associates may congratulate themselves that they have initiated one of the finest hospitals in the service, and need not be afraid to send their friends to view it, for Dr. Janeway and his gentlemanly janitor will see that they are shown all the points of interest.

Vermont Union State Convention.

Montpelier, Wednesday, July 9.

A State Convention of those who are in favor of sustaining the Constitution and the Union, and of supporting the National Administration in the present crisis of the country, was held here to-day for the purpose of nominating candidates for Governor, Lieutenant-Governor and Treasurer. Stephen B. Cozzy, of Montpelier, was elected President. The following nominations were unanimously made:

For Governor—Frederick Holbrook, of Brattleboro.

For Lieutenant-Governor—Hon. Paul Dillingham, of Waterbury.

For Treasurer—J. S. Page, Esq., of Rutland.

Resolutions were adopted, favoring the confiscation of the property and slaves of rebels; urging the speedy and effectual suppression of the rebellion; supporting the general policy of the National Administration, and pledging Vermont to furnish men and money to the full extent of her ability, tendering hearty thanks to the brave and patriotic soldiers in the field, and thanking Gov. Holbrook for the prompt manner in which he tendered to the President Vermont's quota of 300,000 additional soldiers. Another resolution accepting certain special acts of President Lincoln as pledges that the Government has cut itself free from all complicity with Slavery, was, after an animated debate, adopted, with a few dissenting voices.
